Advises Jews Ask Fair Share Of Reparations In Each Country

Resettlement of displaced Jews from Central Europe in Palestine and a plan to fight anti-Semitism in Latin America are being discussed at an international conference of Jewish organizations in London.

Seventy delegates from fifteen nations are attending the conference, which is expected to arrive at a plan for "immediate practical action" to help Jews throughout the world.

The conference program suggests that the bulk of displaced Jews in Germany and Austria emigrate to Palestine and that others go to the United States, South America and Australia. The number of Jews expected to go from Europe to the United States before July 1 is estimated not to exceed 5,500.

Jacob Blaustein, of Baltimore, Maryland, chairman of the executive board of the American Jewish Committee, said he would propose restitution of all Jewish-owned property in Germany and Austria.

The proceeds, estimated at several million dollars, should be placed at the disposal of an intergovernmental committee for resettlement of displaced Jews, Mr. Blaustein said.

Other delegates of the American Jewish Committee include Alan M. Strook, of New York, vice chairman of the executive board; Jerome Rothchild, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Edward A. Norman, of New York; and Dr. John S. Lawson, executive vice president of the Committee.

Expressing doubt that any international organization would interest itself in compensating Jewish victims of the Germans or restoring their property, E. F. Q. Henriques, of the Anglo Jewish Association, [illegible]

[illegible] covered only British subjects and ascertainable money claims or debts. Suggesting a broader interpretation of traditional legal doctrines relating to claims against enemy states, he urged that Governments undertake to settle claims for all persons under their jurisdiction and not only for citizens.

Reports on the present conditions and future prospects of the remnants of Jewish communities in Europe show a marked divergence as to the desirability of emigrating to Palestine.

David Jeroham, of Bulgaria, reports that the overwhelming majority of the 50,000 Jews still alive in Bulgaria desired to remain there and only a small fraction of the most impoverished families wanted to go to Palestine.

Jules Braunschvig of France also reported that only a small fraction of French Jews showed any desire to emigrate. There are about 220,000 French Jews and 110,000 alien Jews still living in France compared to 350,000 before the war, M. Braunschvig said, and very

Jews And Patrol Clash In Vienna

British and American military police and a group of some 250 demonstrating Zionists clashed on the Ringstrasse in Vienna when an international patrol attempted to enforce the rule against unlicensed public demonstration.

The Zionists had come with Zionists flags and placards from an assembly to demonstrate before the Bristol-Sacher Hotel, where the [illegible]

[illegible] demonstration and were marching to the Jewish community organization's headquarters to disband when the international patrol, made up of a half-dozen British and American military police and one Russian military policeman, halted its jeep across the line of march and tried to break up the demonstration.

The demonstrators at the head of the column flared up. A group gathered around the Russian soldier and shouted explanations, pointing accusingly at the British police. The patrol tried by pushing the Jews at the head of the column toward a side street to halt the demonstration but finally the leaders broke through and continued their march despite shouts and occasional pushes from the military police.

Mrs. Roosevelt Moved By "Lost People"

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, picturing the "complete and utter misery" she saw in Germany, said she was convinced that the United States must supply not only money for food but moral leadership to save the world.

Mrs. Roosevelt addressed 2,000 women at a rally at the Waldorf-Astoria, launching the 1946 campaign of the women's division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York. Mrs. Roosevelt, moved as she seldom is in public, pictured the despair in a displaced persons camp for Jews near Frankfurt, and the numbness she said had settled upon the remnants of the Jewish population of Europe.

The most harrowing aspect of this camp, she said, was not its physical hunger and cold, but what she called "spiritual uprooting", the sense of being a lost people.

"It is true they want to go to Palestine, because that represents to them some roots," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "The sooner these people can be where they can become citizens and feel they are building a new life, the better it will be for the whole world."

In describing the horrors she saw in her visit to four displaced-persons' camps during her two-and-a-half-day stay in Germany, she said:

"Europe, as it is today, gave me the most completely miserable sense of what people can suffer and how the suffering can numb them and how it can sap their strength. It gave me something else which I should like to pass on to you. It gave me the feeling that we have been saved untold misery, and that we must have been saved for a reason. That means [illegible]

[illegible] fail, what is my punishment going to be?"

Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, wife of the director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration said its work was limited geographically and legally, and that it could not do the whole task of relieving the misery of war-shattered Europe.

"My husband asked me to assure you," she added, "that the needs are so great that if U. N. R. R. A., the agencies comprising the United Jewish Appeal, and all other private agencies put together

Says British Not Informed On Palestine

A British Jewish soldier who returned to London, England, from Palestine, where he served for nearly four years, gave a lecture to members of the Anglo-Palestinian Club on the present situation in that country. He spoke from the point of view of the ordinary Jewish man and woman in the street, reports the London Jewish Chronicle.

The lecturer said he had been most of the time in a large garrison which had 1,200 civil employees, male and female, Arab and Jewish. He emphasized that he had had no contact with any Zionist officialdom, but plenty with the ordinary men and women, and that he was not expressing any views of his own but was merely recording the attitude and outlook of these people in the hope that they might give a key to the happenings in Palestine to-day. He had not been in Palestine right up to the time he left the Middle East because, as they knew, Jewish officers and men who were in the country were, a little while ago, without ceremony, sent out. But up to the time of his leaving, the Arab troops were still there. Nobody thought of sending Arab officers and troops out of the country. They were taken into consultation as full partners in the security measures, though part of them were the Transjordan Frontier troops, who had made themselves famous for attacking peaceful settlers.

Referring to the ignorance in England of the true situation in Palestine, the lecturer said the first newspaper he saw was the Daily Sketch, in the centre pages of which there were pictures of Jewish and Arab police, and one [illegible]

[illegible] successful boxing in history. Everybody in Palestine knew that Arabs and Jews were not fighting each other at all, let alone with enthusiasm.

When he was last in Tel-Aviv, in December, he spent an evening in a Jewish café, a large proportion of the patrons of which were Arabs, spending their time peacefully in a Jewish atmosphere, dancing to Jewish music. He had been in Jaffa and seen Jews and Arabs walking about their business quite peacefully. There was certainly no tension at all. The situation was summed up rather well by a cartoon which appeared in one of the Hebrew papers in Tel-Aviv showing an inhabitant of that city wearing a suit of armour; when asked why, he answered: "I have just been listening to a BBC broadcast from London."

The lecturer reminded his audience of the expulsion from Palestine of Constantine Poulos, a jour-

Sees Exodus Of Austrian Jews As Heavy Loss, Promises Rights

To date no restitution of stolen Jewish property has been made in Austria but the Ministry of Property Administration attributes this to technical difficulties arising out of the military occupation and the four-power rule. Few Austrian Jews are now living in the country. There are about 4,000 in Vienna and a few hundred elsewhere in the country, according to estimates of Jewish organizations here. Most Jews now there are foreign displaced persons.

Members of the Vienna Jewish community voted on January 31 on the question whether they wished to stay there. More than two-thirds voted to leave Austria and Europe as soon as possible. Recently some Government quarters have felt that this reluctance to live in or return to Austria will be a heavy loss to Austria. President Karl Renner explained that Jews had elaborate personal and commercial connections that were invaluable to Austrian business. He emphasized that these connections had been particularly important in providing eastern and southeastern European markets for Austrian goods, which are likely to be so essential to Austria's future prosperity.

The 180,000 Jews who lived in Vienna before the war were the city's traders and salesmen. It is generally assumed there that Austrian foreign trade will suffer severely from their loss. At present, however, it is estimated that only 500 of Vienna's adult Jews have regular employment. Most Jews are forced to live on small stipends from the Jewish community organization or on help provided by Jews in America and by the American military.

Chancellor Leopold Figl employed both the press and the radio to give full publicity to his promise that American Jews living in [illegible] Austria would receive the full rights and privileges of all other citizens.

The promise was made to the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine. The Chancellor added a further promise of full restitution to Jews whose property was stolen by Nazis as far as this with within Austria's power.

Significance was attached to the circumstance that the Chancellor sought the maximum publicity for his statements. It is general knowledge that Austria is still saturated with anti-Semitism; that the new Catholic Popular party, which he heads, has grown out of the Christian Socialist party, at various times closely associated with anti-Semitism.

"Austria is a democratic state," Dr. Figl said, "and I and my Government hold fast to the principle that right is right and law is law. No difference between Austrians because of their faith or race is permitted. For that reason all Austrians without exception must be restored to their full rights. We have all suffered together and wish only to be Austrians. I signed an order by which the National Solidarity Association will give equal treatment to all who return from concentration camps and prisons, including Jews, for they are also Austrians like all the rest of us.

"A Ministry of Property Administration and Economic Planning has been created specifically and on our own initiative to seize and preserve all property that the Nazis have stolen and to investigate the Nazis' falsifications of titles. When Jews were forced to sell their property under terror by a threat of force, then those sales were illegal and the property can be restored to the original owner. The ministry has been instructed [illegible] Mr. Henriques commended [illegible] provision made by the Allied Reparations Commission for a fund of around $36,000,000 from German gold and foreign exchange for the aid of non-repatriatable victims of German action, but he pointed out that many Jews not classified as non-repatriatable had also lost heavily. He urged the Jewish communities to ask for the allocation of a part of their countries' share in reparations for the benefit of these Jewish groups and others deprived of property or means of support by the Germans.

Mr. Henriques also pointed out that the existing provisions for the registration of claims against Germany by Jews and others in Britain were inadequate because they all allowed no claims arising out of German acts before 1939 and

Vote To Aid Palestine Entry

Support of Jews in refusing to "recognize the illegal acts of the British in their attempt to deny the rightful entry of Jews into Palestine" was voted by the American Jewish Conference in session at Cleveland, Ohio.

This move came in a resolution adopted in connection with consideration of British policy toward the Jews.

Other resolutions condemned Great Britain's recent termination of the mandate over Trans-Jordan; expressed the conference's "shock" at "recurrent and brutal violation of civil rights in Palestine," urging it be stopped as contrary to "Anglo-Saxon law and the best traditions of the American-English people," and calling for the trial of Armin El-Husseini, former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, as a war criminal and Nazi collaborator.

Delegates also went on record as desiring a permanent American organization which can "speak authoritatively for the Jewish community."

After delegates to the conference passed a resolution recognizing "a widespread demand" for such an organization, the group's interim committee was authorized to explore the possibilities of establishing it.

The conference, established during war-time as an emergency organization to deal with Jewish problems, will meet again within the next fifteen months under a stipulation of the resolution.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, Zionist leader, declared in an address that the "ideals and aims of a good Jew are synonymous with those of a good American."

"We will stand by and support Jews of every country in American occupied zones to aid their return to Palestine," he asserted.

Relief Cargo Valued $144,938

One of the year's largest shipments of relief supplies, valued at $144,938, has gone to Europe as part of American Jewry's contribution to distressed Jews overseas through the record $100,000,000 United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine. The supplies, shipped by the Joint Distribution Committee, include shoes, clothing, blankets, condensed milk and emergency food rations, and will be distributed by J.D.C. representatives in the former concentration camps in Germany and Austria, now serving as centres for displaced persons, and in Czechoslovakia.

To Bremen, Germany, for transhipment to the camps and to Czechoslovakia, went 828 cases, 379 bales and 2,489 cartons. Thousands of men's and women's suits, coats, sweaters, mackinaws and other items of wearing apparel—all brand new—are included in the shipment, also blankets and shoes for boys, girls, and adults.

The condensed milk will be distributed among hungry, undernourished Jews by the J.D.C. as supplementary relief to those Jews who receive daily rations from the army, among J.D.C. supported hospitals and clinics, and as part of the regular J.D.C. basic relief program in Czechoslovakia. The emergency food ration, Pemmican, consists of vitamin-filled nuts and fruits. This shipment is carrying 4,375 pounds of this food.

Book About Jews Takes Prize

"Wasteland," the story of a Jewish immigrant family, was announced as the winner of the twelfth Harper Prize Novel Contest, conducted by Harper & Brothers. Jo Sinclair, 32-year-old Brooklyn-born woman writer, was announced as the recipient of the $10,000 award.

The judges were Irita Van Doren, literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune Book Review; J. Donald Adams, conductor of the "Speaking of Books" column of The New York Times Book Review, and Betty Smith, author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn." They voted without knowing who the authors were and reached their decisions without consultation. The manuscript of "Wasteland" [illegible] the announcement went on, "arrived only a few days before the contest closed.

"Jo Sinclair had read about the Harper Prize Novel Contest in the book supplement of a newspaper, and decided to send her manuscript, hoping, as she says, only for publication without ever dreaming of the possibility of getting the prize itself. When she received a letter saying the novel had been accepted for publication, she felt that she had at last achieved the goal she had been working toward for ten years.

"She was born only a few years after her immigrant parents arrived here from Europe. Soon after, the family moved (from Brooklyn) to Cleveland. A philanthropist in the city where she lives had done much to help young artists and a friend suggested that Miss Sinclair be given $10 a week for a year to enable her to write a novel. She contributed $5 of this to her family and lived on the other $5."

Miss Sinclair, who is now at work on her second novel, said in regard to "Wasteland":

"I have tried to apply observations made over a period of years of many first and second generation families I have known, and of the problems they face. The family in my book happens to be Jewish, but their adjustments and maladjustments might be those of hundreds of immigrant and second-generation families in the United States."

Tilled Soil In Stone Age

Stone Age deposits unparalleled in the Near East were found at the western foot of Mount Carmel during excavations from 1929 to 1934 in the Wadi El Mughara (Valley of the Caves), the Jerusalem correspondent of The London Times is now able to report.

A joint expedition of the British School of Archaeology in Jerusalem and the American School of Prehistoric Research brought to light eight skeletons, four of which were almost complete. They were the remains of inhabitants of Palestine in the Stone Age and belonged to a race unlike any other prehistoric man.

Thousands of years before Elijah and his servant reached the [illegible] handles were carved in the form of animal heads and seemed to belong to a class of bone implements often found in Europe in the upper paleolithic and mesolithic layers.

JEWISH TEACHERS NEEDED IN EUROPE

James Marshall, member of the New York City Board of Education, urged that Jewish teachers "go in person or give their support to sending other teachers to Europe to help rebuild the spiritual and educational life of Jewish children, remaining in continental Europe."

Mr. Marshall, who returned from a tour of Europe, addressed 750 members of the Jewish Teachers Association.

"Before the war there were 1,200,000 Jewish children in continental Europe, outside of Russia," said Mr. Marshall. "Today there are about 150,000. Most of the orphan Jewish children—especially those in Germany—are at loose ends, completely aimless, among demoralized adults. The problem of how to care for them will last for several years, and the morale of the children may be irretrievably lost. In most countries—notably in Germany, Poland and Yugoslavia—these children are receiving no formal education at all."

U.S. Sergeants To Be In Pageant

The two New York sergeants who sent and received the famous last message from Corregidor met each other for the first time, three and a half years after word of the American surrender to overwhelming Japanese forces was flashed from the Philippines to Hawaii.

Sgt. Irving Strobing of Brooklyn, who tapped out the last message from "the Rock", shook hands with Sgt. Arnold Lappert of Jamaica in an office of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States at the Hotel Plymouth, and asked one question:

"How did it come through"

Sergeant Lappert thought a minute and then smiled.

"Clear and clean," he said.

Sergeant Strobing then told his story once again, of how on May 5, 1942, he was awakened to take the overseas key, of how he kept sending a running account of the hopeless battle in the tunnels, and of how he signed off finally with a message to his folks at home, [illegible] "Guess that tells the story."

"You sent the message," Sergeant Lappert put in, "but me, I had a general for a runner. One-star, but a general. I don't know his name exactly—Collins, I think—but I'll never forget his face over my shoulder and the way he ripped the paper out of my hand and ran."

Sergeants Strobing and Lappert said they had agreed to re-enact the sending and receiving of the message in a pageant to be held March 4 at Madison Square Garden, New York, under the auspices of the Jewish War Veterans. The pageant, which will be part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the organization, will depict the role of American Jews in all of that country's wars.

MEMORIALIZE PARACHUTISTS AT TEL-AVIV

At least seven of Palestine's young men and women gave their lives as Allied parachutists behind the enemy lines in Europe while engaged on important military missions and in Jewish rescue work. The names of the seven were revealed at a memorial meeting held in Tel-Aviv under the auspices of the Histadrut Executive Council, as follows:

Haim (Enzo) Sereni, of Givat Brenner, born in Rome on April 17, 1905. He dropped into Northern Italy on May 15, 1944. He was caught by the Germans and murdered in Dachau.

Hana Szenes, Caesarea, born on June 17, 1921. Parachuted into Yugoslavia on March 13, 1944. Entered Hungary in June after great effort, was caught, tortured and then executed.

Havina Reik-Martinovitch, Kibbutz Maanit, A.T.S., born on June 22, 1914. Dropped into Slovakia in September, 1944. Was active among the remnants of Jewry, helped to organize Jewish partisans. Caught on October 21, 1944, and was executed.

Zvi Ben-Yaagov, Kvutzat Ha'-Hotrim, born February 28, 1922, was caught on October 21, 1944, and was executed.

Raphael Reis, Kvutzat Hulkot, born on August 11, 1914. Dropped into Yugoslavia in July, 1944, returned and went into Slovakia. Caught on October 21, 1944, and executed.

Abe Berdichev, Kvutzat Ba'-Maavak, aged 27, executed in Slovakia in December, 1944.

Peretz Goldstein, Maagan, aged 21, caught in Budapest in 1944 and executed.

All Over France They Helped Jews

If a burly policeman were to halt Capt. Robert Gamson and gruffly demand his name, he might be told: "I am Henri Lagnos, farmer, 37 years old, resident of Moissac." That is a lie but Captain Gamzon would probably get away with it. He managed to palm off the same story hundreds of times on the Gestapo when he was one of the Maquis leaders during the occupation of France, writes Murray Schumach, in the New York Times Magazine.

Captain Gamzon, now touring the United States in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal, does not look a bit like the popular conception of the quick-thinking, merciless, underground fighter. He is a small, thin man with sandy hair and mustache, pale blue eyes and an apologetic manner. How this grandson of a Chief Rabbi of France, son of a mining engineer and product of a research laboratory made this quick transition is not only a story of physical heroics but of an amazing psychological metamorphosis.

Until he was 35 he had never committed a crime. But for three years beginning in 1941, capital offenses became his daily routine. It was his job to supervise the forging of 50,000 identification cards; to smuggle many thousands of their holders out of German reach; to fight occupation troops. For instance, with only 250 Maquis he seized an armored Nazi train in France and captured a garrison of 3,000 German soldiers. For that achievement he wears one of the two citations on his Croix de Guerre and the equivalent of our Purple Heart.

He still vividly recalls the first time he broke the law—a matter of concocting a tower of lies that a youth might be smuggled from France with false identification papers. "For me", he says, "it is difficult to lie and do that kind of work. My conscience, it bothers me. At the moment it seems like a sin énorme. It is so very big. And yet, later, I give 50,000 false certificates. I become so it is easy for me to lie to the Gestapo and look him straight in the eye." He shrugs, still puzzled a little at the change in himself.

One thing worries him slightly even today—the future of the youths who became men during the years they served under him in the Maquis. When he first began working with them they were the equivalent of our Boy Scouts—he founded the Jewish Scouts in France more than twenty years ago. These were the youngsters he had lectured against theft, deceit, violence, brutality. Now, as Maquis, he had to teach them the reverse. He did his job well. Repeatedly his boys were tortured, sometimes fatally, but they stuck to their lies and never betrayed their comrades.

While Captain Gamzon talks softly about the role of the Maquis and reluctantly about Nazi atrocities, he is aroused when he speaks of the magnificence of the non-Jewish French, who seldom passed up a chance to aid Jewish children during German occupation. "Every Jewish child," he says, "had no difficulty to find a non-Jew to put him in his home, in his farm, in a school. I remember for a little time after the debacle there are many in France who are what you might say 'neutral'. But when the persecution of Jews begins then they know it is wrong.

I remember how it is in the south of France. That is where I am from—Lyon. The Catholic Archbishop, he is an old man, maybe 80 years old. He is against this persecution. Even when the Germans come to the south of France he writes letters saying this persecution is wrong. All over France there are non-Jews who help the Jews. I do not think this thing you know in America."

Now that the war is over and there is no need for Maquis, what will happen to Captain Gamzon? With a wife and four children in France it would seem he would go back to his good job in radio research. He thinks not.

"There are many radio engineers," he says, "but not many of us are left in the youth movement. Two-thirds of the other Scout leaders are dead or missing. If I am alive it is an accident and I am obliged to continued the work for my old friends. For me and my comrades the work is not finished. For us there is a new life. It is a different life. But it is necessary."

The second annual $1,000 George Gershwin award was won by Harold Shapero of Newton Center, Mass.

Moderation

IS THE PATH TO LASTING PEACE!

Today, moderation is a necessity. By moderating our pleasures, by controlling unessential spending, we serve our nation and ourselves best.

The House of Seagram for many years has advocated moderation. Now, during these days of adjustment, it suggests this even more strongly.

We Canadians can still enjoy comforts, standards and pleasures that less fortunate people are denied. But let us remember that the continuation of these advantages belongs only to those who treat them with respect.

Let moderation be our intelligent contribution to the future—moderation in spending—moderation in all things we do.

ON JUDGING PEOPLE

By Rabbi David Monson, Of Toronto

One of the most popular pastimes of the idle of mind is sitting, standing, or usually jumping in judgment of other people—their doings and sayings. We are not referring to mere gossip, which is usually limited to painstaking, verbal analysis, with the vari-colored trimmings and embellishments which only the expert exterior character-decorator can supply. We are thinking of that irritating step beyond gossip, that of judging, indicting, condemning, sometimes forever, the individual whose sin or alleged sin becomes, for some mysterious reason, the concern of women and men at sea, at dinner, on the street—and frequently even in the synagogue.

The Sages of the Talmud, with their rare, human perceptive powers, forewarned us against such base pastimes. Among their first ethical preachments were the admonitions: "Judge all men in the scale of merit"; "Judge not thy fellowman until thou art in his place". We might best understand and apply these noble injunctions if we followed the simple slogan, "Judge not", for the obvious reason that we have no right to judge people. No one of us, not even the wisest of us, ever has all the evidence about the persons and deeds we are prone to judge.

There are certain unattainable aspects of our knowledge of people which defy us to dare final judgment. Only the Supreme Judge of Judges can, for example, look into the hearts of men, bare their very souls, and know the why and wherefore of human actions, however clear they may appear to our puny minds. Of course, society must set up courts of men to judge and protect it. But we, as individuals, are invested with no such rights. And if our impulse to judge people persists in compelling judgment, then that judgment must remain within us, unspoken, unuttered. For, many a home, many a career, many a life has been destroyed by the unsought judgment that frail, imperfect, and often more sinful mortals have dared to pronounce upon a fellowman.

Shun the gossiper, protect the one gossiped about, for there always comes a time when "the judges are judged".

J.D.C. Worker Finds Factories, Makes Clothing

Jewish displaced persons near Heidelberg are spending a more comfortable winter because Saul Elgart, one of the first Joint Distribution Committee representatives to enter Germany, decided that if clothing for needy Jews couldn't be released by military authorities fast enough in Germany, he'd go out and make it. How the Nazi's own tools are now working for displaced Jews in Germany was told by the 31-year old J.D.C. worker in New York offices of the Committee.

Elgart saw displaced Jews, many of them former internees, still wearing their concentration camp garments, or shivering in inadequate clothing. He scouted the area to see what was available. In a captured Army warehouse, he discovered 60,000 yards of confiscated German cloth. Then, cutting red tape, he found a sympathetic officer who approved his requisition for the material.

Within the next few days, the J.D.C. representative located three garment factories, one of which was still staffed with Nazis. With official sanction Elgart ousted the Germans and put in a staff of Jewish displaced persons to make clothing from the material. In a few hours the wheels were humming under the direction of displaced Jews who had managed similar establishments before Hitler oppression. Salaries for the workers were paid by the local Burgomeister.

Within a few weeks, these three plants turned out 4,000 suits and coats; 3,000 pairs of men's trousers, and some 2,000 undergarments and shirts. In addition to the actual value of this clothing, the project has succeeded in restoring skills and has provided useful employment for many.

Huge Gifts Mark Fabulous Relief Drive

The campaign of the United Jewish Appeal to raise $100,000,000 to alleviate the misery of Jewish war victims was launched in Washington with Bernard M. Baruch, elder statesman, as the main speaker.

Never before have Jewish organizations asked for charity on so large a scale in one drive, but Henry Morgenthau Jr., former Secretary of the U.S. Treasury, declared that Jews are "dying like flies every day" in Europe and that $100,000,000 would take care of only the irreducible minimum" needs.

Former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, reminded the meeting that a large percentage of the survivors of Nazi persecution were in three European countries in which the UNRRA does not operate.

Mr. Lehman told the gathering that U. N. R. R. A. is unable to help many Jews because it does not operate in former enemy countries, "where a large percentage of the surviving Jews not reside."

He said the "vast majority" of the 100,000 to 150,000 Jews in Austria and Germany "cannot and do not want to live there. They look upon these and other countries in Europe as the graveyard of their slaughtered relatives and friends and as the unforgettable symbol of persecution and frustration. . . . They want to go to Palestine."

Conditions in displaced persons camps in Germany and Austria, he said, have improved in recent months, but they cannot be looked upon as a "substitute for home."

Mr. Lehman said the needs of Jews in Eastern Europe, particularly Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria, "are overwhelming." Many of the surviving Jews in Europe, or about 600,000, are living in these three countries, he pointed out, and hundreds of thousands are "in dire need."

Mr. Morgenthau told the meeting: "Let me assure you that the need is desperate. Jews are dying like flies every day due to the Nazi curse. We here in the United States are the only ones who can give the money necessary to give these men and women life. It is a rare privilege [illegible] to the donation, no [illegible] Palestine, he said, "seems to me to be the only place that most of the homeless Jews of Europe want to go to." He urged the immediate admission of 100,000 Jews into Palestine.

Criticizing Communism, Mr. Baruch pleaded before 350 Jewish leaders from all parts of the country, for preservation of the American system of individualism, free enterprise and private charity.

The appeal — actually $103,304,025 is sought—began auspiciously with three gifts totalling $1,750,000. Members of the family of the late Julius Rosenwald donated $1,000,000. Relatives of the late Felix M. Warburg gave $500,000. Edmund I. Kaufman, of Washington, gave $250,000.

The funds raised would be allocated as follows: $58,350,000 for use throughout Europe by the Joint Distribution Committee for Relief and Rehabilitation of Homeless and Stateless Jews; $43,872,000 for the refugee settlement program in Palestine under direction of the United Palestine Appeal; and $1,032,025 to be used by the National Refugee Service in the program of readjusting Jewish refugees in this country.

The gift of $1,000,000 was announced by Mrs. David M. Levy, daughter of the late Julius Rosenwald. She recently returned from a study of the condition of Jews in Belgium, Holland, France and England. The other members of the Rosenwald family who joined in this gift were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern, of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. William Rosenwald, of New York; and Mrs. Max Ascoll, of New York.

President Truman warned the world that crime by which 5,700,000 Jews perished under the Hitler reign of terror will be avenged in justice and appealed to the nation to help the 1,500,000 Jews left homeless, hungry and sick in devastated post-war Europe.

The President issued his statement during a fifteen-minute White House visit of a delegation [illegible]

The Jewish Agency has removed the obstacles which prevented Jews, headed for Palestine, from leaving Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Hungary. The first emigrants from Poland were given permission to depart for Palestine.

All Jewish school boys and girls, between 17 and 18, are now required by Palestine Jewish institutions to register for national service on the land. Hitherto, such service was obligatory only for graduates from secondary schools.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Letters Of Appreciation

A number of communications have reached my desk from Christian friends who attended the Fifth Annual Institute on Judaism for Clergy and Educators held at Temple Emanu-El, in Montreal; and some pertaining to our general inter-faith program:

Dear Dr. Stern:

Every Institute of yours, which you give me the opportunity of attending, convinces me ever more strongly of the very high value of the services you are rendering to the community by reason of it. Being neither a cleric nor an educator, I have to fight my battles against bigotry and intolerance in other places than the pulpit or the classroom.

The seeds of class hatred are of firm root, indeed, in the present day pattern of life, and, as an aftermath of the war, may spread their infamous growth still further, unless uprooted and destroyed by the united efforts of men and women with clear vision, humanitarian impulses and unfaltering courage to act right in the highways and by-ways of life in all its ramifications.

Obstacles there are many and there will be many. Weariness and discouragement may threaten to blunt and vanquish the crusaders in quest of fair play and decency among all men, but the struggle must continue until the final goal is achieved of true equality and universal respect for all races and all religions. Your Institutes with their presentation of well-chosen themes by competent scholars certainly afford the elan vital for our day and age.

Yours faithfully, as ever,
Victor E. Garts.

Dear Dr. Stern:

I have just returned from the Institute on Judaism for Clergymen and religious educators. I want to thank you again for your kind invitation to me, and hope also you will express to the Governors of your Synagogue my compliments on their continued interest in sponsoring this Institute. It is one of the intellectual high-lights and spiritual inspirations of my year's work. I also wish to say I think the lectures of Prof. Betten were outstanding.

Sincerely yours,
J. M. C. Duckworth,
Executive Secretary,
Young [illegible] Christian Association.

Dear Dr. Stern:

Without forgetting the past, or making any invidious distinctions, one can say that the Temple Institute this year was a great success. The attendance was large, the lectures were excellent, the listening was close, the questions pertinent and helpful. What might have been tasteless dissertation was savored up by Professor Betten with abundant and judicious humor. It was interesting to see how synagogue and church preaching in their great eras ran parallel and how much one had learned from the other.

Above all, it was helpful to hear the lecturer bring out the old but necessary truths that apart from the sanctions and inspirations of religion the teaching of morality quickly becomes futile. Matthew Arnold contended that conduct was three-fourths of religion. Just so; but how vital is that other fourth with its deep far-running roots and free-flowing sap fructifying the other three-fourths like a Canadian maple.

The officers of Temple Emanu-El and you are rendering a fine service by what is now called the Temple Fellowship Day in learning high thoughts and hospitality. We are deeply your debtors.

With personal regards,

Sincerely yours,
Rev. Dr. D. L. Ritchie,
Dean Emeritus,
United Theological College.

Dear Dr. Stern:

May I take this opportunity of expressing to you something of the deep appreciation of your audience in St. James. Such meetings all tend to a much better understanding and respect for each other's religious convictions while seeking for a common ground of religious belief.

Your subject, "Where Jew And Christian Meet", was most timely and extremely thought-provoking and I feel sure that many of your listeners have a more comprehensive conception of the role played by the Hebrew people in the monotheistic idea of God as presented in the Holy Scriptures.

Most friendly comments have been made on all sides of me with regard to our meeting together and I am glad to be able to pass these along to you.

As your work is bring to men the concept of One God, the Father of us all, and the brotherhood of man, you have our best and deepest wishes for great success, and may this new era of 1946 be one in which Jew and Christian alike shall earnestly say: "This is the generation of them that seek Him, that seek Thy face, O God of Jacob."

Once again many thanks for your courteousness in visiting us.

Sincerely,
Rev. Chas. F. Tilbury,
Minister, St. James United Church.

to restore all so-called Aryanizations. It is obvious that Jews forced by thousands to leave Austria within twenty-four hours could not conclude legal and property sales. Whoever returns here has a right to receive back his property if it is still here.

"When Jews return here they will be as welcome as any other Austrian. They will get back their full rights just as will any other Austrian. Whoever regards Austria as his home and wishes to participate in Austria's reconstruction is welcome, no matter what his religion.

"However, we should have no illusions. A portion of the Jewish property here has been removed by the Nazis and disappeared. We cannot return that. We can only attempt to make restitution within the limits of what is possible."

ADVISES JEWS

little anti-Semitism remains eighteen months after the liberation.

Samuel Eisenman, of the Netherlands, on the other hand, said that, of 23,000 Netherland Jews left from the pre-war population of 140,000, few wished to remain in the Netherlands and many desired to go to Palestine. He said that anti-Semitism in the Netherlands was a serious problem now, whereas it had never existed before in modern times.

A contrasting picture of rapid re-integration into the community and a hopeful economic future was drawn for neighboring Belgium by Gen. E. E. Wiener, president of the Central Jewish Consistory in that country. So it varied, country by country. The leaders at the conference were surprised at the wide divergence of these reports but believed that the pessimism of Jewish communities increased in proportion to their immediate economic circumstances.

The delegates from Poland, where the Jews' future seems most doubtful, could not get their Government's permission to attend the conference but their difficulties are being kept in mind. One of the principal points made by Leo Baeck, former Chief Rabbi of Berlin, was the necessity for opening Palestine to displaced Jews, of whom by far the largest numbers are British.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I call them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an author."

Antagonism between Jews and Negroes in the United States has been engaging the attention of Jewish defence organization workers off and on during the past few years, at least behind the scenes, the chief point of interest being the possibility that some sort of Fascist outfit might attempt to use the Negroes against the Jews, especially in big centres like Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, and other places where there is heightened antagonism between whites and blacks in general. A penetrating article entitled, "Candor About Negro-Jewish Relations", by Kenneth B. Clark, instructor in psychology at the College of the City of New York, appears in the February issue of Commentary, the new publication of the American Jewish Committee, to shed considerable new light on a subject which cannot be ignored.

Dr. Clark, who once did some work with Dr. Otto Klineberg, a former Montrealer, in literature on race differences, brings first-hand experience to his studies of group relations between Negroes and Jews. He says that on the whole the situation cannot be considered a favorable one, and does not seem to think much of the Jewish approach to this problem which is presented by real or imagined grounds for antagonism existing wherever Negroes and Jews are in contact. The Negroes make such concrete complaints as that a Jewish butcher refused to sell meat to Negroes in his neighborhood while selling to whites who lived outside of it. In one case Jewish merchants were accused of Hitlerism in discriminating against Negroes. Jewish housewives are charged with exploitation of domestic workers, and the "Jewish landlord" gets the blame for all housing ills.

Of Jewish efforts to remedy the situation Dr. Clark says it is a question whether these efforts are well-advised, or have any vital effect. One trouble is that the social psychologist too often lacks valuable insight into the problem of Jewish-Negro relationships because he has not directly observed real-life situations. If Dr. Clark had been blunt as well as candid, although a little diffident, he might have said that Jewish experts in this matter have not had the actual experiences and probably have to rely too much on book knowledge or theory. He cites the round table, "The Negro In The United States", which was part of an Institute on Judaism and Race Relations called by the Commission on Justice and Peace of the Central Conference of American Rabbis last November. This round table showed a reluctance on the part of the group to deal with specific problems. Therefore even its chairman's statement, expressing Jewish ability to appreciate fully the plight of "our Negro brothers"; listing obvious injustices from which the Negroes suffer in spite of gains; and stating the need for a just society, was finally watered down.

Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, a former leader of Holy Blossom Temple in Toronto, and now of Temple Israel, in St. Louis, Missouri, where there are many Negroes, was present for a few hours and brought his praiseworthy common sense and understanding to bear on the discussion by trying to get the group to include among the injustices suffered by the Negroes a statement about anti-Negro practices in Jewish hospitals and some department stores. He [illegible] from prevailing discrimination to appeal to Jewish hospitals to admit Negroes as patients and staff members. There was discussion and talk around it but in the end, after Rabbi Isserman left, it was felt by the group that it was not justified in singling out Jewish institutions. Its members showed that they were well-intentioned but unable to free themselves from American attitudes toward the Negro, and so avoided the practical issue.

Dr. Clark points out as an elemental point that mere generalities, highly charged with moralizing sentimentality, cannot bring about desired social changes nor can the problems of the Jew and the Negro be dealt with by mere words. First the facts are needed and then concrete action. Bemoaning and deploring the facts, denying them, ignoring them, or accepting them, that is, assuming that not much can be done about them, are not a solution. There is a need for an objective analysis of the active factors to form a program for improvement.

Anti-Semitism in a Negro, says Dr. Clark, may offer a pretext for the release of aggressions that come from the insecurity and humiliation of his status, and it may put into words his feelings about whites in general. It may be a way of identifying himself with the non-Jewish white group. It may help him to feel an inner group security. With the Jews and their attitude toward the Negro there is a conflict between the desire to keep apart from a group that appears to be even more despised than their own, and the tendency to cooperate with persons of another insecure group. Anti-Negro attitudes among Jews appear to offer a basis for identification with the dominant white Gentile, and a protective covering to escape the full impact of anti-Semitism, so that the status of Southern Jews is more secure than that of Jews where Negroes form a smaller proportion of the population and where there is less active anti-Negro feeling.

Through the barbaric excesses of Nazism, racial and religious prejudice has been shown as a symptom of basic psychopathology in the society, threatening the life and dignity of every human being. As a result, many individuals and groups are demanding practical action. A sentimental approach is not good enough. Dr. Clark sees in the problem of Negro-Jewish relations the general social fact that prejudice has a certain political, economic and psychological function in American society. The thing then is for all people to pool their efforts against all prejudice. The real affliction is one man's hatred of other men and that is the threat to society which must be eradicated. f.i.c.

Tel Aviv Jews Show Solidarity With Resistance

Members of the Jewish resistance movement took over the modern city of Tel Aviv for six hours as 50,000 agitated Jews attended the funeral of four raiders killed in an unsuccessful attack against the British.

Not a single British soldier was in evidence in the city as one-third of the population marched through the streets in a mile-long funeral cortege honoring the dead Jews. They were shot when they attacked a British police mobile force at Sarona, a German colony near Tel Aviv.

The city's mass demonstration of solidarity with resistance groups surprised even the best-informed observers and caused the immediate recall of high Government officials from week-end resorts. Immediate consultations were scheduled and the army and police were ordered to stand by throughout Palestine. Some sources predicted that a major crisis was at hand.

A number of Jewish officers and men, assisted by special Jewish constabulary, maintained order in the city. British soldiers remained on the outskirts of the town and looked on as the cortege marched to the cemetery.

The Jewish resistance movement, an offshoot of the secret organization Haganah, organized the demonstration, distributed Haganah pamphlets freely and marched in the parade during the six hours when it controlled the town. Tel Aviv, a modern city of concrete and steel, is almost all Jewish.

The British military commander in northern Palestine imposed a curfew on the entire coastal area around the port of Haifa after the attack on Haifa police headquarters. The measure is the latest in a series of precautions taken to guard against increased terrorist attacks and to prevent an anticipated increase in illegal Jewish immigration that may coincide with the arrival of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine.

Both the Royal Air Force and the British Navy, it is reported, have been placed under a general alert entitled the "Palestine inquiry eve" operation.

Jewish newspapers disclosed that attacks had been made by members of the Jewish resistance movement and not by the extremist terrorist organization, Irgun Zvai Leumi, as was at first believed. The papers openly published black-bordered obituary notices giving the names of the four "victims" and their connection with the secret organization.

Many men and women in army, navy and air force uniforms and men wearing the caps of the Jewish volunteer special police marched in the cortege. The pall-bearers included men in Jewish settlement police uniforms.

This open demonstration of sympathy with Jewish resistance aims by the entire Jewish community, which had previously disclaimed the terrorists and repeatedly deplored their methods, was regarded by informed observers as a turning point that might have far-reaching consequences. It was pointed out that the Government would henceforth be entitled to regard the 50,000 participants in the parade as members of resistance groups subject to recent emergency decrees specifying drastic punishment for membership in such organizations.

It was considered significant that the demonstration took place on the eve of the inquiry committee's arrival and that it was witnessed by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Zionist Organization who arrived to appear before the committee.

SAYS BRITISH

nalist, and read his dispatch, which appeared in the New York Post on October 23, which it was believed was the cause of his withdrawal, in the course of which Mr. Poulos had compared the situation in Palestine with that of Greece in 1944, and had said:

"There have been 'incidents'. Earlier this month the Government forces of law and order opened fire on an unarmed mass of people, and wounded seven. The Government first announced that the people had attacked its forces 'with sticks', and that these forces only sought to disarm them. Later, [illegible] admitted that the people had fired first. The BBC recently announced from London that 'no clashes have occurred between Jews and Arabs'. But later BBC broadcasts revealed studious efforts by the British to build up tension here in preparation for intervention which will be described to the world as an effort at 'making peace' and as a step toward the 'prevention of massacres' among the Jews and Arabs."

Referring to the sudden concentration of vast numbers of British troops in Palestine, the lecturer said that at the time the people were amazed at their arrival. The situation was not in any way bad, there was no great ill-feeling between Jews and Arbs. And yet these crack troops came over in such numbers that it seemed there would be no room either for Jews or Arabs in Palestine. And amazing too was the way in which they went around, in armoured cars, fully armed. They did not know what the troops had been told beforehand. But they knew that some of them had been flown over from Germany where they had been lording it over the Germans and they knew in their own minds what they intended to do. They made no bones about it. In the officers' mess, in the sergeants' mess, they said quite openly they were there to "settle the Jews."

Two or three years ago, said the lecturer, when acts such as that recently perpetrated at Lydda took place, the attitude of the ordinary Jews in the street in Palestine was the same as that of the Jews in England. Bit by bit over the last two or three years, mainly because of the behaviour of the British authorities and troops, their attitude had changed. To-day the people were together in these matters.

Two or three years ago the relationship between the population and the troops was not bad. There was fraternization, friendship, and even inter-marriage. Then things began to deteriorate. The first reason for this was the impression created from the highest to the lowest level in the troops that the Zionists were awkward, putting unjustified demands to the British Empire.

Then prices in Palestine began to rise, and the troops, out of touch with the rise of prices in Britain also, thought the population was trying to "catch" them. It became very much worse when the new troops came and seemed to be afraid to go into the Jewish towns and villages, unless they were heavily armed against "the vicious Jews" they had apparently been told to expect. In the eyes of the Jews of Palestine to-day, now that the Nazis have been defeated, the chief enemies of Jewry are the British.

Aid Without Bias, Says Church Group

The Provisional Committee of the World Council of Churches declared that the "entirely [illegible] failed to materialize completely."

A resolution, read by Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, and adopted by the committee said that as a result of this failure hardship and distress had been brought to millions of persons. The committee asserted that the entire repatriation program of the Allies should be re-examined.

In another resolution the committee said the "desperate situation of refugees and displaced persons was causing profound concern" and asked agencies to aid refugees and displaced persons without discrimination.

Declaring that it was recording its "horror at the unprecedented tragedy which has befallen the Jewish race in the Nazi attempt to exterminate European Jewry," the committee asked the Christian church to "combat this evil" by testifying against the principles and practices of anti-Semitism, by ministering to the needs of those who still suffer under anti-Semitism, and by co-operating with Jews in reciprocal attempts to remove causes for friction.

The committee also declared that Christians of Hebrew ancestry "should be equally assured of a full share in the rights and duties" of the Christian church.

Co-presidents of the provisional committee will include the Archbishop of Canterbury; Dr. Erling Eidem, Archbishop of Uppsala, Sweden; and Dr. John R. Mott, of New York, president of the World Young Men's Christian Association.

had several times what can possibly be provided through public or private grant, there still would not be enough to meet more than a small fraction of the need."

Rabbi Milton Steinberg, of the Park Avenue Synagogue, pictured the fate of the Jewish population of the little town of Seraye, in Lithuania, where his father was born, making it a symbol of the fate of all European Jews. Mrs. Abraham N. Geller, co-chairman with Mrs. Benjamin Lazarus, for the women's campaign, presided.

At a luncheon session for 400 in the Starlight Roof, it was announced that the women have raised $1,250,000, including $110,250 pledged at the luncheon. Mrs. Roosevelt spoke again, briefly, and there was another address by Louis Nizer, chairman of the United Jewish Appeal speakers' bureau. The total for the campaign throughout the country is $100,000,000 and New York's quota is $35,000,000.
